The chart shows the ranking of ABA-LSAC law schools based on the 75th percentile GPA and LSAT scores for their entering students. It was created using admissions data provided by the schools themselves for the 2012-2013 entering class. This represents the most recent data available, which can be found in the ABA-LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools, 2013 Edition. The chart gives some indication of the relative difficulty of being admitted to a particular law school and shows the strength of the entrance criteria at Brigham Young University (BYU). The chart is based on an original concept by Boston College entitled NAPLA Law School Locator.